The project had a major impact on the employers' organization but also on the participants and through the mobility activities carried out the two proposed objectives were achieved: - the development of professional skills in the field of flour products manufacturing technologies for the participants through an exchange of good practices

- the development of professional skills in the field of communication to the final consumer of information regarding the consumption of flour products depending on the nutritional needs of everyone.

The project had a great impact on the participants because they had the opportunity to improve their professional skills, they also developed their organizational, communication and teamwork skills, thus leading to the personal and professional development of each participant.

All the people who participated in the mobilities in Italy and Germany improved their level of skills and abilities specific to the bakery sector in order to contribute to the promotion of the consumption of flour products.

Thus, they have now assimilated a broad vision of the learning process and are able to develop the interconnection between formal and informal education in order to integrate students into the labor market in Romania, which has a very high fluctuation.
